

FSA survey of financial capability shows generational divide

Contributed by BMRB
Monday, 03 April 2006
Last Updated Wednesday, 23 May 2007

The results of a major survey for the Financial Services Authority, exploring the personal financial capability of the UK population, have attracted widespread interest.

FSA survey of financial capability shows generational divide

The results of a major survey for the Financial Services Authority, exploring the personal financial capability of the UK population, have attracted widespread interest.

The survey - the largest of its kind ever undertaken in the world - was conducted by BMRB, who carried out more than 5,000 45-minute in-home CAPI interviews. Development work and analysis of the findings were undertaken by the Personal Finance Research Centre at Bristol University.

The full report on the survey was published on 28 March on the FSA website (www.fsa.gov.uk). Click here to view the full report: http://tinymce.moxiecode.cp/mce_temp_url

Â